ESL Tips and Quiz: Using "Had" to Express Wishes

I Wish I Had... is a great book for children 2 to 7 years old. It teaches children about specialness of each of the animals. The illustrations are superb. Each sentence on each animal is sometimes surprising because some of the descriptions are wonderful but not the first thing you think of when you see, a blackbird or a mouse.

I wish I would have gone out before it started raining. If we ignore the "I wish" part of the sentence, the difference between the two is a conditional tense in the second one (the "would"). Again, without the "I wish", we'd have the first sentence indicating that the person speaking went out in the past and did so before it started raining, whereas the second sentence indicating that the speaker didn't go out but would have done so had some unspoken condition been met.

Wish + (that) + past perfect: We can use 'wish' with the past perfect to talk about regrets from the past. These are things that have already happened but we wish they'd happened in a different way. This use of 'wish' is very similar to the third conditional. I wish that I had studied harder at school.
